Water Conservation Measures

Water conservation involves the effective protection, regulation, and management of water resources. At Shri Mahaveer College, reusable water systems and water conservation practices are implemented to save energy and ensure the prudent use and maintenance of the water supply. This includes managing both the quantity and quality of water used.

Water resources management (WRM) at the college encompasses the planning, development, and administration of water resources, addressing both water quantity and quality for all applications. These practices ensure sustainable water use and contribute to the college's overall environmental conservation efforts.

Rain water harvesting system: Runoff generated on the campus is collected using a check dam constructed on a natural drain passing through the campus. The stored water percolates into the ground to recharge groundwater. Rainwater from rooftops and surface runoff within the campus are collected in five percolation pits, each measuring 3m x 3m, strategically located at feasible points to further enhance groundwater recharge.
